Presenting or facilitating together

Co-facilitation is the experiential process that underlies a variety of partnerships — such as co-presenting, co-coaching and co-leading — where the power of the pair is greater than the sum of the individuals.

This is an excellent course for anyone or any pair that is working with groups or teams and if you want to develop your skills as a presenter. You will be working in pairs to present to small and medium-sized groups of other participants. You will receive feedback on how the diverse pairings you are part of have incorporated the material we will be presenting. If you sign up solo, you will be partnered up with another solo participant for many of the exercises so that you get the practice of developing relationship.

Skill Set

Learn ORSC (Organization & Relationship System Coaching) tools that leverage the gifts of your partnership, creating transformation in your participants and sustainability as facilitators.

Outcomes

This experiential three-day workshop takes you on a playful and practical journey where you will:

- Learn of the strengths and edges present in your partnership
- Naturally deepen your connection and range
- Learn how to create more safety, trust and permission so that your relationship can really fly rather than be merely “safe” and uninspiring
- Walk away with tools to support and create a wise, dynamic partnership that is bold, resilient and committed to delivering value to the client/customer rather than your ego

Leaders

Jim Patterson, MCC, and Lori Shook, MCC, well known trainers of course leaders, designed this workshop. They both have the gift of being able to design, implement and supervise programs that tap into the unique magic and dance of co-leaders and individuals alike.
